

LOSELEY PARK

Press Release

Surrey, 19th July 2010. Loseley Park, the stately home for all occasions, is about to appear in the national press in a feature reaching 4 million on and offline readers.

The national coverage in the Radio Times edition, which goes on sale on Tuesday 20th July, looks at Loseley Park and its star role in films like Emma.

The double page spread, entitled Stately Stars, refers to Loseley's appearance as Donwell Abbey, Mr Knightley's estate in the 2009 production.

In addition, the Radio Times recommends a visit to the award-winning home and gardens, which the More-Molyneux family have inhabited since it was built for Elizabeth I in 1562.

The national recognition as an outstanding historical home with beautiful gardens and parkland, follows the public vote on Sky earlier this year choosing Loseley Park as one of the Top Ten wedding venues in Britain.

"It's very exciting to be in the Radio Times and included in this particular feature," says Michael More-Molyneux, owner of Loseley Park. "We love the film industry and have featured in many productions from Emma and Churchill at War to Midsomer Murders and Amazing Grace."

The Radio Times and Loseley Park have also teamed up for a special offer of 2 for 1 tickets for visits. For details please read the Radio Times 24-30th July cover edition or call (01483) 405 119.
